You're not having doubts if you don't really know what the problem is. ~~~ rdl Not having doubt = having no reason to question it. There is a very real problem of "well, the company made some misrepresentations", but "the incentives are all wrong" is not something you end up with easily without the whistleblower playing his hand. ~~~ golemotron > There is a very real problem of "well, the company made some > misrepresentations", but "the incentives are all wrong" is not something you > end up with easily without the whistleblower playing his hand. You can't really believe that companies are innocent of making misrepresentations on purpose. It's simply too easy to shade the facts. ~~~ rdl Probably, but I also know they make some mistakes in inevitable reality. ----- RickJWagner Legitimate whistleblowers should be applauded and protected.

ShopNotes 02 Sheet Metal .Field The present disclosure relates to microwave filters, and more specifically, microwave filters using a longitudinally coupled resonator to obtain an operating bandwidth in excess of 40 percent. Related Art In microwave circuits that include electronic components (e.g., mixer circuits and resonators), it is desirable to have good selectivity, which means that the circuit provides acceptable rejection of interfering signals. In wide band applications, the circuit should have a large amount of bandwidth relative to the minimum frequency band of the circuit. The design of a wide-band microwave circuit is often complicated by the need to have a good selectivity at more than one frequency. The design of such a wide-band circuit is particularly challenging when the circuit contains multiple resonators with many-to-one coupling structures. An example of a circuit that provides multiple bands is a digitally programmable multi-band microstrip band-pass filter for multiband IEEE 802.11a wireless LAN (WLAN) receivers. In WLAN, various regions of the radio frequency (RF) spectrum are used for different communication services, for example, indoor cellular telephony, wireless LANs, and Bluetooth. Such a circuit, or filter, may be used to process one of the bands of the RF spectrum such that a standard communication protocol can be used in the corresponding band. The band may be separated from other bands of the RF spectrum by a low-pass or band-pass frequency filter. A commonly known topology for a band-pass filter (BPF) or RF filter, that includes multiple resonators, is a ladder topology. Such ladder topology circuits are often used in communication systems, such as RF filters
